

Brain Electronics

We will discuss how to utilize the excellent functions of the brain and nervous system in terms of electronics and information engineering. In particular, we will introduce and discuss methods for modeling nerve cells and networks, mathematical handling, and specific application examples as well as how the functions such as pattern information processing and learning / self-organization, which existing computers are not good at, are expressed physiologically.