

Basic Biology

The behaviors of biosystems are well-regulated and controlled by interactions between various functional biomolecules such as DNA, RNA and proteins in different hierarchies: cells, tissues and organs. In this course, students are expected to acquire basic knowledge and understanding of the regulation of biosystems in terms of biochemistry, cell biology, physiology, and pharmacology. The understanding will help them work on the cutting edge of biotechnology, biomedical engineering, etc.